

Jenise Lopez

The Deadly Triangle

It was a beautiful morning as I headed to airport to catch my flight back home after an amazing vacation. Soon I board the flight and it's time for take off. It's smooth sailing from here. I begin to doze off, when suddenly the planes seat belt warning light & alarm comes on. The flight attendants begin running for seats... The pilot makes an announcement for everyone to make sure they are buckled in as we are fast approaching some turbulence. My heart begins racing as I see the fear in the flight attendants face. There is something bigger than turbulence. Immediately the brightness from the sun that was once gleaming from the windows disappears, it's suddenly dark and gloomy. I look out of the window and the skies are black. There are huge waves knocking ships over. Without warning a huge triangle shaped electrical current appears. It is powerful! There are electrical rays flashing everywhere. "What is going on?" I watch as a boat nearly touches the triangle and it and disappears. There are screams and children crying on board. Everyone is screaming that we are going to die. A group of us force open the pilots cabin door. We yell at him to turn this plane around! He's trying but the electrical currents are too powerful. They feel like a magnetic current pulling the plane closer. We all grab on to the control to help the pilot try and turn the plane. It feels hopeless. The wheel is tight and almost impossible to turn. The plane shifts a little we continue to turn, turn, "Oh my God we are approaching fast we are about to get taken in! We are going to die!!!!"